Committee on Radiation Protection and Public Health (CRPPH)

OECD/NEA Workshop on
Practices and Experiences in Stakeholder Involvement for Post Nuclear Emergency Management

12-14 October 2010
Bethesda, Maryland, USA

Hosted by the United States Nuclear Regulatory Commission

Workshop website: <http://www.nea.fr/html/rp/washington10/>

- SECOND ANNOUNCEMENT -

The Committee on Radiation Protection and Public Health (CRPPH) of the OECD Nuclear Energy Agency invites governmental, technical support and other relevant professional organisations involved in emergency management, and particularly those developing or involved in related processes for stakeholder involvement, to attend the Workshop on Practices and Experiences in Stakeholder Involvement for Post Nuclear Emergency Management. The workshop will be held 12-14 October 2010 in Bethesda, Maryland, USA, hosted by the US Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

The OECD/NEA workshop will provide a forum for participating organisations from many countries to:

- exchange information and experience on approaches to and issues in stakeholder involvement in post nuclear emergency management; and
- identify areas where enhancements in stakeholder involvement in post nuclear emergency management could be achieved nationally and internationally, and recommend approaches to address these areas.

Background

Key lessons in nuclear and radiological emergency preparedness and response (emergency management), identified through events and exercises have led to improvements in emergency arrangements nationally and internationally. Among these lessons has been the recognition that the effective management of complex emergency situations requires the involvement of a broad range of stakeholders, including governmental and non-governmental entities and civil society, that will be involved in or affected by the management of the situation. To be effective, this involvement must begin and be organised as part of preparedness. This fact has been incorporated into the ICRP's new recommendations for the protection of people in emergency situations and for those living in long-term contaminated areas after a nuclear accident.

Since the early 1990s, the NEA/CRPPH has been investigating and promoting stakeholder involvement in radiological protection decision-making. This interest was most notably manifest in three stakeholder involvement workshops organised by the CRPPH in 1998, 2001 and 2003 (the Villigen series). The CRPPH published in 2006 a study of stakeholder interaction with radiological protection experts in the post-Chernobyl recovery situation, and more recently has addressed the implications of stakeholder involvement on organisational structures.

In parallel, the post-emergency management situation, specifically the preparedness and response aspects associated with consequence management and transition to recovery, has been taken up by the CRPPH Working Party on Nuclear Emergency Matters (WPNEM) in its international nuclear emergency exercise (INEX) series. Recent exercises addressing consequence management following a nuclear or radiological emergency have demonstrated that the involvement of a range of governmental and non-governmental stakeholders, while posing challenges to emergency management structures, presents opportunities for better identifying and implementing sustainable approaches to longer-term recovery. This workshop has been organised to further explore this key aspect of emergency management.

Workshop Objectives

The objective of the workshop is to share practices and experiences in approaches to stakeholder involvement as part of preparedness for consequence management and recovery following a nuclear or radiological emergency. The workshop will:

- provide an international forum for information and experience exchange amongst governmental and technical support organisations (international, national and local) on approaches to, and issues in stakeholder involvement in post-emergency management, including international implications. Focus will be placed on sharing practices and experiences in many countries on approaches to stakeholder involvement during preparedness to facilitate an effective and coherent response;
- identify commonalities in strategies, good practices, as well as limitations for developing effective stakeholder involvement processes as part of preparedness. This will include experiences in how the radiological protection profession and public institutes have responded to the challenges and opportunities in stakeholder involvement;
- identify ways to enhance stakeholder involvement in post-emergency management.

Interested participants are reminded that the workshop will not provide a forum for input into the decision-making processes of specific issues at the local or national level.

Workshop Format

The workshop will include a series of plenary presentations to provide participants with an overview of practices and experiences in stakeholder involvement in emergency preparedness and response from various countries and programmes. Follow-up break-out sessions will be held to allow participants to address identified topics and related issues. Sessions will be moderated by designated experts to allow participants to discuss their relevant international and national experiences in the context of the topic areas and to identify areas for enhancing stakeholder involvement in post-emergency management. Outcomes will be presented in plenary followed by open discussion, with a view towards elaborating ways forward to achieve more effective stakeholder involvement as part of preparedness at the international and national levels. The workshop will also include 2 topical sessions.

Following the workshop, the proceedings (presentations, discussion summaries and conclusions) will be prepared and made available to participants and other interested parties.

Participants are asked to indicate their preferred break-out session when registering for the workshop, although this may be adjusted by the organisers to facilitate discussions.

The working language of the workshop will be English.

Workshop Audience and Participation

The workshop is addressed to governmental, technical support and other relevant professional organisations involved in emergency management, and particularly those developing, or involved, in related processes for stakeholder involvement, such as:

- Radiation Protection, Nuclear Safety and Emergency Management Authorities;
- Scientific, Technical and Professional Organisations;
- International and Intergovernmental Organisations

Interested individuals are requested to register for the workshop with the NEA by the noted deadline. Organisers may limit participation in accordance with the workshop venue and format.

Dates, Registration, and Travel Arrangements (including Visa Requirements)

The workshop will be held 12-14 October 2010.

While there is no registration fee, workshop participation is limited and pre-registration is required. The deadline for registration is 1 October 2010. Participants may register using the attached registration form, or on-line at the following workshop website:

<http://www.nea.fr/html/rp/washington10/>

The workshop website will also be used to post relevant documents for the workshop, as well as practical information such as hotel lists and directions to the venue.

Participants are responsible for their own travel, accommodation and meals. Information on visa requirements for visitors to the United States (including deadlines for obtaining visas) can be found on the US Department of State website (http://travel.state.gov/visa/visa_1750.html). Registered participants requiring invitations may contact the workshop organisers listed below.
